

Video Relay Service (VRS) is a wonderful concept for the deaf communities. However I find it irresponsible that many VRS providers get extremely selective over who gets the free equipment for using the VRS systems. They have already given me the impression that VRS access is not freely open to everyone that needs it. Until the VRS providers make their services accessible as the text based telecommunications relay service already is, funding to VRS providers be restricted since they already restrict access to it.
